SHE WORE a chic brown ensemble that complemented her small, neat figure, greying hair and finely freckled skin. When she settled down in the radio lounge at CBC Toronto to talk about cooking, Eustella Langdon looked more like someone who had just come from her couturier and had nothing more to worry herself about than a series of pleasant social engagements, than a culinary expert. But she can pop into an apron and put together a meal that would make the most finicky gourmet kiss her fingers and roll his eyes to heaven in delight—and yet would satisfy the down-to-earth taste (and pocketbook!) of an ordinary joe. And starting this Monday afternoon she will pass on some of her cooking tips to Trans-Canada Matinee listeners in her 29th Cooking School of the Air on CBC radio.

"The idea that you have to be a born cook to be a success in the kitchen is nothing but a fairy tale!" says Mrs. Langdon. Would-be kitchen queens who have been fighting a losing battle for years with poor recipes and recalcitrant ovens will probably disagree with Mrs. Langdon, but she is firm in her belief, and points to herself as proof. As a girl she knew next to nothing about cooking, so her parents enrolled her in a home-making class, where she was given a thorough grounding in the chemistry of cooking—"that's all it is, you know, an exact science. Good recipes have been very carefully worked out scientifically, and if you follow them to the letter and use good ingredients, it's hard to go wrong. The trouble starts with shortcuts, or when you begin throwing in this and that, working on the assumption that if a little of something is good, a lot will be better!

"Even the finest product can be made more appealing with a little dressing-up and garnishing," says Mrs. Langdon. (As if to illustrate her point, baritone Bernard Johnson, then strolling by, asked leave to interrupt the interview to tell Mrs. Langdon how delightful he thought her furry brown Borcellino hat!). "A good cook needs imagination and inventiveness for putting the stamp of her own personality on her dishes," she says. Mrs. Langdon does this with herbs, not only because of their fine, tantalizing flavours, but because of their boquet and decorative beauty. "I like them because they haven't been tinkered with since the beginning of time—the ones we use are the same as the ones Moses looked at. They were used for barter and tithes by ancient Greeks and Romans, and murder was even committed for them and with them!"

It was herbs that introduced her to CBC listeners. Early in the Second World War her fine little Elizabethan herb garden attracted the attention of Elizabeth Long, then in charge of CBC programs for women listeners. Miss Long dined with the Langdons and had a whole new "taste world" open up for her. Until then herbs to her had meant only parsely. Because of wartime restrictions on spice imports and the prevalence of coarser and cheaper cuts of meat, it occurred to Miss Long that herbs might be the answer to the problem of making food taste better and look more glamorous than it was. She asked Eustella Langdon to do three series of broadcasts on growing, harvesting and using herbs. Now Mrs. Langdon is starting her 20th year of annual broadcasting about cooking. She gets letters and tatted handkerchiefs from listeners all over Canada and the northern States, who write her for advice on anything from making milk puddings to organizing a m a m m o t h church bazaars.

Each of her programs is prepared in collaboration with Dr. Elizabeth Chant Robertson, well-known Toronto nutritionist, who has very definite ideas about the importance of good food in warding off illness at any age, and getting the most out of life.

Of course good food is not necessarily expensive food. Cheap cuts can be made into gourmet dishes with a little time and trouble, and that is where Mrs. Langdon comes in. This season she will give listeners some timely tips on transforming pork and fish into tender, succulent dishes that cost little but have great taste and visual appeal. And she will offer hints on using meat substitutes such as eggs, cheese, dried peas and beans. Of course she tries out all her recipes on her own family, "and," she says, "after 27 years of sampling my experiments they're still thriving!"

Mrs. Langdon is not one of those cooks who looks back longingly to the good old days when her grandmother did all her egg-beating by hand and thought nothing of stirring up a dozen eggs or a pound of butter at a time. She champions electric mixers and pressure cookers—especially for the business girl in a hurry. "A pressure cooker won't do justice to a fine roast of meat, but it does wonders for an old ham long past its prime, and for stew and vegetables."

Is modern cooking better or worse than it was in grandma's day? "Much better!" says Mrs. Langdon. "Look over old cook-books and you'll see that their recipes are extremely elaborate and dressy, but basically not sound cooking. In the old days the rich ate richly and the poor poorly. Nowadays look at all the fine home economists and dieticians guiding and guarding the food and diets everywhere. Tasty food is not so much a matter of money. It takes time and thought and starts with shopping. But what a variety we have to choose from compared with grandma!"

Mrs. Langdon's great interest outside cooking is music—she is president of the Women's Musical Club of Toronto—and antique Canadian silver, a subject on which her financier husband is considered a leading authority. Some of Mrs. Langdon's culinary specials are served on old silver dishes with a fascinating history.

Recently the Langdons spent a holiday in Europe. How does Canadian food rate with the Continental variety? "Really good food is the same everywhere," she says. "I think some of the best continental food I had was served in small, inexpensive restaurants. It was basically simple and prepared with great care by experienced people not in a hurry. That, to me, is the essence of good cooking." She approves of cooking with wine, but warns that "it can be overdone, and wine won't cover up bad cooking. The stress should be on a little wine. Marinating food in wine beforehand is just as good as tossing it into the pot while it's on the stove."

We asked Mrs. Langdon for one of her famous herb recipes and one for a dessert "a way, way out." Here they are:

Joan Fairfax

SHE sings, writes her own arrangements for the orchestra, plays the piano and the accordion, keeps house, flies her own plane, and if those weren't enough accomplishments for one small, glamorous blonde, she is now emerging as a graceful dancer on her own CBC-TV show.

She is, of course, songstress Joan Fairfax, who can be seen Sunday nights in a program of romantic songs, music and choreography, the latter inspired by dancer Alan Lund.

Joan has been appearing on CBC shows since 1951, but the start of her showbusiness career dates back to the Second World War, when she travelled with a concert party as a 16-year-old. A year later she married Tommy "Pinky" Higgins of the RCAF. For a while after the war she gave up singing to help her husband in his fish-an-chip shop, but when he went into real estate she had more spare time and used it to study singing at the Royal Conservatory of Music in Toronto. Later she sang with Art Hallman's orchestra and soon had all the dance band, radio and nightclub work she could handle.

Since the advent of TV in Canada she has been a frequent performer on CBC shows—'Cross Canada Hit Parade, The Denny Vaughan Show, and Wayne and Shuster Show, and this summer she appeared weekly in her own CBC-TV show.

BEETHOVEN'S ROOM AT THE SCHWARZSPANIERHAUS IN VIENNA, where he lived his last 18 months. The scene was reconstructed by the English artist, Batt, from visitors' descriptions of the apparent simpleton, living in squalor amid a litter of pathetic ear trumpets, scraps of food, broken piano strings and crudely scrawled manuscripts. It was during this period that Beethoven wrote some of the famous last quartets.

The Best of Beethoven

His nine symphonies—Fridays on radio, starting this week. His only opera — this Sunday on television. His late quartets — coming soon

IN 1951 CBC Times printed a survey showing that during the previous season Canadian symphony orchestras devoted more time to Beethoven than to any other single composer. A few issues later some prominent Canadian musicians explained why, in their opinion, Beethoven's works were the most popular in the concert hall.

Sir Ernest MacMillan said, "Perhaps Beethoven's music is supreme in popularity chiefly because it bears the stamp of a noble and interesting personality—a personality all the greater for its underlying simplicity and directness." Also, he said, "Beethoven, for all his crotchety disposition and brusque manners, must have been imbued with a warm and open-hearted love of humanity. Humanity may persecute and even crucify the great lovers of mankind but it returns to them in the end because it needs their love and their inspiration."

Conductor Desire Defauw, of the Montreal Symphony, agreed: "The music of Beethoven is the music of men. It echoes their innumerable aspirations, their joys, their loves, their sorrows, and all that sings in their inner beings. Beethoven's love for mankind is always at the root of his thoughts. His inspiration ever awakens in him the need of comforting humanity. More than any music, Beethoven's is above all human. No one can escape the tremendous majesty of his work, and men will always be under the spell of the genius who gave his art and his life to those he loved so profoundly."

Composer Barbara Pentland said: "Beethoven is the first composer to reflect a social consciousness more closely related to the present day. In his popular works his dramatic and dynamic expression is more obvious to the layman than the more subtle, albeit profound, utterances of some of his predecessors. Nevertheless, however subjective his musical thoughts and however dramatic their treatment, they are controlled by a master builder whose great

"Fighting Words" Goes Deeper

GENERALLY speaking, a limited intelligence is content with discussions about people, places and the confined world of concrete things. But a thinking person, demanding more meat in his conver-will be shown in a series of dramatic film sequences. Other sequences reveal the swift capture of Nationalist and Japanese arms. Historic shots of Red soldiers rushing into the palace of Chiang Kai-Shek at Nanking to seize him, and of Mao-Tse-Tung, hand-raised, inaugurating the Chinese People's Republic at Peiping on October 1, 1949, will also be seen.

Fighting Words

This week private stations will carry a conversation between Nathan Cohen and Robert Hutchins, American educationist who became president of the University of Chicago at 30. (See story this page). This program will be seen next Sunday on CBWT, which this week carries one of the regular panel discussions based on controversial quotations submitted by listeners and viewers.

sation, turns to ideas, and so has unlimited horizons.

Some of these long and interesting vistas of thought are being explored in a new series of "specials" being offered this season on Fighting Words. Every four or five weeks moderator Nathan Cohen will forsake his role of moderating a quiz panel and introduce a "conversation in depth" with a forthright, outspoken guest who is identified with a certain point of view or set of ideas. Cohen appears as a conversationalist, not an interviewer. His job is to probe, examine and criticize, rather than to act as a sounding-board for his guest's ideas, to get beneath the surface of important issues. "And," says producer Cliff Solway, "we hope that within a short time these specials will include an exposition by Cohen on some basic and important development, all by himself or with visual illustrations."

What sort of people will Cohen talk to? "Not necessarily well-known names," says Solway. "Just because someone has an obvious personality it doesn't give him license to be on the show. We're looking for articulate people who represent an attitude of thought or who espouse an idea that will have wide appeal and provoke controversy among our audience. We want to try to stimulate thought—and perhaps action.

ber from "Kismet," a Broadway hit show of a few years back.

Let's Look

This week Donald Crowdis talks about the Micmac Indians of the Maritimes: What they had to work with (birch bark, porcupine, caribou and fish) and how they used these materials. He will also discuss the influence of the white man's trade goods and tell how the Indians used them.

Youth '60

Tommy Common's guests this week are actor Peter Mews, 17-year-old fashion designer Janet Westaway, mime artist Marcel Choinacki, ceramic artist Lee Carson, and sculptor Brian Salter.

Mickey Mouse Club

(1) "Lend a Paw," the award-winning Pluto cartoon in which Pluto saves a kitten from drowning, then gets jealous when Mickey Mouse makes a great fuss of the cat. (2) "Adventures in Dairyland," this week — "The Storm," concluding the serial, the children cope with all the emergencies brought about by the storm. (3) The visitors, Annette and Sammy, return to Hollywood and are interviewed on television about their adventures on the McKennis Farm. (4) Newsreel-surf riding on Honolulu's famous Waikiki beach. (5) Japanese children hold a ceremony at one of Tokyo's famous shrines. (6) A children's pottery class in New York.

Don Messer's Jubilee

This week's guests (tentatively scheduled) are folk singers Peggy Seager and Ewen McColl. Marg Osborne sings "Scarlet Ribbons," and Charlie Chamberlain offers "Galway Bay." They duet on "Mocking Bird Hill" and "Night Watch."

Riverboat

Wayne and Shuster

A 60-minute special starring the two masters of comedy, Johnny Wayne and Frank Shuster. Guest vocalist Denyse Angé, French-Canadian singing star. Miss Angé was born in Quebec City. In 1955 she was the winner of the television series "Pick the Stars" and also Miss CFCM-TV (Quebec City). She has appeared on "Cross Canada Hit Parade," "Jackie Rae Show," "Holiday Ranch" and with Arthur God-

"These occasional conversations in depth will give us a chance to examine at length some of the issues touched on only briefly in the regular Fighting Words shows. I can't think of anyone better suited to spark these discussions than Cohen. Besides being well equipped intellectually, he is immensely curious about people, their ideas, and how they think through their arguments. He won't hesitate to chase down the implications of any of his guests' remarks, and get the full flavor of their thinking."

The first guest was Kenneth Tynan, the young New Yorker magazine theatre critic whose arrival from London last year put the Broadway theatre world on its ears. This week's special will feature Robert Maynard Hutchins, colourful and contentious American educationist. A dean of the Yale Law School at 29, he became president of the University of Chicago at 30, freely in the United States. The program includes: (1) "Sitting on Top of the World," with Johnny Wayne, Frank Shuster and 12 dancers. (2) "Apartment Sketch," with Johnny and Frank interpreting the voice of an apartment building at night. (3) Denyse Angé sings "Que Reste t'il." (4) Don Gillies and his dancers step out on the university campus to illustrate the arts versus sports. (5) Frank Shuster, roving reporter, battles his way through an Arctic blizzard to find Professor Waynegartner who is concentrating his vast knowledge on Arctic research. (7) Bob Goulet sings a popular song.

The Town Above

Roger Lemelin's series about the problems of a French-Canadian family, the Chevaliers, who live beyond their means in the exclusive "upper town" of Quebec City. Starring Roland Chenail as Fred Chevalier, Denise Pelletier as his wife, and Louis Tureene, Catherine Begin and Yvon Thiboutot as their teen-age children.

CBWT—Happyland

With Jake Park and his polka band, and singers Kerr Wilson and Donna Andert. Ernest Mutimer, producer. From Winnipeg. (Sundays on affiliated stations).

NATHAN COHEN

and shook the American educational system at its roots when he announced "we have confused science with information, ideas with facts, and knowledge with miscellaneous data, and students must come to college primarily to think." He objected to "uneducated specialists," and set about doing something to raise standards, no matter who felt the pinch. Among other things he abolished intercollegiate football in 1939—he ascribes his own excellent health to the fact that whenever the impulse to exercise comes over him he lies down until it passes. He believes in educating as many people as possible, rather than an elite segment of society, and to this end edited the Great Books of the Western World, a series of 54 volumes containing 443 works by 74 authors from Homer to Freud, which offered the man in the street a smattering of the great tradition.

John Gunther described Hutchins as "a man who boils with vision, likes idiosyncracies, and is completely fearless and independent." As Nathan Cohen, too, has some extremely strong feelings about education, and is not loath to speak his mind, their conversation Sunday night on TV (Wednesday morning on radio) should spark some spirited arguments — and possibly some Fighting Words.

This week — "Wild Man." Sky and Penny help rescue a logging company paymaster after his car crashes when a sniper's bullet goes through the windshield.

Fred Davis is moderator as panelists Toby Robins, Gordon Sinclair, Pierre Berton attempt to guess the headline story by questioning someone involved in it. From Toronto. This week's guest is C. R. MacLean, publisher of TV Week.

Startime

This week — "George Burns in The Big Time," with George Burns, Jack Benny, Eddie Cantor and George Jessel. Four of the entertainment world's outstanding comedians. George Burns will be host and star of a nostalgic valentine to vaudeville's "two-a-day" and its comic stage. The show will originate from the NBC in Hollywood. Burns, Benny, Cantor and Jessel will appear in at least one number as a quartet, in duets and in solos to recall and recreate the key moments of their long and distinguished careers as showbusiness comedians. Although the four stars have been headlined separately in vaudeville, radio, motion pictures, nightclubs and television for more than 40 years and are close friends offstage they have never performed together in the same act.

Press Conference

Leading journalists question a government official or well-known public figure on important issues in the news. From Ottawa.

THE BIG FOUR ON "STARTIME"—A quartet of the most celebrated U.S. comedians—George Jessel, George Burns, Eddie Cantor, and Jack Benny (left to right) share the same bill for the first time in their long and hilarious careers this Tuesday on "The Big Time." Key moments in the career of each will be recalled during the 60-minute "Startime" salute to vaudeville's comic stage.

architectural sense dominates the material. How nobly his ideas embodied in such structures have withstood time and stress — and many a mangled performance—is apparent to us now."

Composer John Beckwith simply quoted the novelist E. M. Forster who (in Howards End) says that no matter who you are or how you approach his music Beethoven somehow "makes the passion of your life more vivid."

CBC radio this season will present two series devoted to performances of some of Beethoven's greatest music — the nine symphonies and the last five string quartets.

The former starts this Friday night when Efrem Kurtz conducts the CBC Symphony Orchestra in the first of six programs devoted to the symphonies.

"It's a tremendous undertaking," says Dr. Geoffrey Waddington, CBC's director of music. "We first discussed the idea with Mr. Kurtz a year ago when he was in Toronto to conduct the first CBC Symphony concert before an audience. He is one of the finest interpreters of Beethoven we have met, and we are fortunate in being able to persuade him to conduct the cycle, which we feel will be a treat for all music lovers."

The intermission host will be another outstanding authority on Beethoven — Irving Kolodin, who has been on the editorial staff of the Saturday Review since 1947, and assistant editor since 1952, and has written numerous books and magazine articles on musical topics. During each intermission he will talk about the Beethoven symphonies, perhaps interview a musical guest, and give impressions of the first performances of the symphonies—how they were interpreted and how they were received."

Two symphonies will be performed on each of the first four Friday night programs. The fifth Friday night program will be an analysis of the Ninth ("Choral") Symphony by Mr. Kurtz and Mr. Kolodin. It will take the form of a rehearsal at which listeners will hear portions of the symphony per-

PETER FRANCIS

Reading Mysteries Is Work For Them

In an office in the CBC's drama department in Toronto there are some odd ornaments on the bookcase—a stark white plaster hand and a grotesque and realistic model of a hairy man-eating spider. Inside the bookcase are dozens of books of mystery stories.

More books of mystery stories are piled up on the desk, and buried in this pile will probably be Peter Francis, for this is the office of The Unforeseen. Peter is story editor as well as executive producer of this thriller series, seen Wednesday nights on CBC-TV.

Peter and his assistant, Lyon Todd, read an average of 80 scripts and short stories in order to find one suitable for television and for this particular series.

"I've just read a book of 100 best stories that didn't yield anything we could use," Peter sighed.

Many people would love to read fiction for a living, but this is only part of Peter Francis' job, and like anything else you can have too much of it.

Lyon Todd added that reading all this fiction spoils his appetite for anything else. He knows the typical mystery plot so well that he can usually foresee the ending of any television mystery drama.

"If I switch on the TV set to Alfred Hitchcock I've usually got it figured out during the first five minutes."

Peter and Lyon each have problems of their own. Lyon finds that he tends to read on to the end of a story even after he's decided that it's not suitable for The Unforeseen—and wastes a lot of time in the process. Peter, on the other hand, finds that he seldom finishes any story.

For the first few programs Peter and Lyon have turned up useable stories on a man returned from the dead, a mechanical chess-player, an artist with a supernatural urge to paint a picture of a condemned man, and a mystery writer in heaven who finds he has been murdered.

The Unforeseen will be pre-empted November 11 by the Louis Jourdan Show. It returns November 18.

BEST OF BEETHOVEN

formed and discussed. Then on the following Sunday the Ninth Symphony will be performed in Toronto's Massey Hall by the CBC Symphony Orchestra, the Mendelssohn Choir, and four outstanding soloists: soprano Lois Marshall, tenor Alan Crofoot, contralto Maureen Forrester, and baritone Donald Bell.

The symphonies will not be presented in the order of their composition. Some of them pair off particularly well, and the programs have been designed to take advantage of this fact and to show the development of Beethoven's art in more easily appreciated sequence than the natural one.

The chamber music series devoted to performances of the "last five" quartets of Beethoven will begin later this season. The quartets will be performed by the Montreal String Quartet. Beethoven's only opera, Fidelio, will be seen this Sunday (Nov. 15) on CBC-TV. This filmed performance is by the NBC Opera Company. (See page 7).

WALKERS' TOUR. When illness put an end to her husband's career as a doctor, Gladys Chantler Walker decided there was a great deal people in their mid-50's could do to fill their lives with a variety of new and useful interests, so she and Dr. Walker began studying various projects which they'd never had time to look into before. They found so much material over the past years, they wrote one book and are now working on another - this one on architecture in Canada. The Walkers are specially interested in Norman architecture and this summer were very happy when an opportunity arose enabling them to visit Britain, to study some of the material

Hemingway's "The Killers"

World heavyweight champion Ingemar Johansson turns actor in new adaptation of a famous short story

"YOU'VE got to see it, feel it, smell it, hear it" to make it come alive on paper, said Ernest Hemingway when asked to explain his mastery of violence in books and short stories.

His extraordinary gift for writing the way frightened and frightening people think, talk and act is well illustrated in his tale of The Killers, which appeared in a 1927 collection of short stories titled Men Without Women. The side-of-the-mouth dialogue of its forlorn characters, pitched in staccato-paced violence, lifts the reader into the centre of the action with shocking reality. It describes a relentless search through the back alleys of a dead man's past. Two hired gunmen come to a small town to hunt down and kill Anderson, an ex-prizefighter, a man who, many years before, had been mixed up in a gang killing. His evidence could hang the murderer, who has since become a tycoon of sorts. The killers wait for their victim in a lunchroom, where Nick Adams, an innocent bystander, overhears their plot to kill Anderson and runs to warn him at the boarding-house where he is hiding. But he is passive and detached, has run away for the last time and will not run again.

A. E. Hotchner has adapted the story for a CBS-TV production that will be seen on CBC-TV this Thursday night. The cast includes Dane Clark as Al, one of the killers; Ingemar Johansson, world heavyweight boxing champion, as Anderson; Ray Walston, whose credits include the stage and screen success Damn Yankees and the upcoming film Tall Story, as the lunchroom proprietor; Diane Baker, soon to be seen in the film Journey to the Centre of the Earth, as the young girl who, with Nick Adams (played by Dean Stockwell), attempts to warn Anderson; Glenda Farrell as the rooming-house landlady; and Frank McHugh, veteran stage and TV star, as a deliveryman.

There has been a movie version of The Killers; it launched Burt Lancaster's film career back in the 1940's. Asked whether he enjoyed movies based on his books, Hemingway said: "I usually can't stand them. The only one made by Hollywood I liked was The Killers. I had to walk out on all the others except The Old Man and the Sea. I was responsible for that one."

Hemingway makes his home in Cuba, but lives from time to time in Spain and France. A year ago he rented a log house in the tiny Idaho town of Ketchum, a mile from Sun Valley, so he could go bird hunting with friends and begin work on a new novel. One day he attended a meeting of high-school boys and girls in a nearby church and answered their questions about himself and his work.

Project '60

• Your program The Mind at Work has just ended, and once again I must thank you for making me listen. Perhaps you do not realize what a service you confer on a housewife with a mind in a state of atrophy when you give her a program of thoughts and ideas which force her to drop her mending and listen. What a tantalizing treasure of stimulating conversation in these days when most of us have forgotten how to converse. Please—more.—Mrs. L. A. McL., Winnipeg.

U.S. Viewer

• We are very fortunate in being able to get CBC-TV through CKCK in Regina as we are in a fringe area. We find Canadian TV to be of a very high calibre and this contact has made us feel that we know our neighbours to the north so much better.—Mr. and Mrs. Harold Munson, Plentywood, Montana, U.S.A.

TV Musicals

• Our family really enjoys the musical programs on CBC-TV—Don Messer, Country Hoedown, Perry Como, etc. We wish more of these musicals were on for early evening entertainment for our children. Music gives a child rhythm and the urge to dance or play an instrument. I do believe that if enough of these programs were shown we would have more musical talent aroused in our children.—Mrs. W. Mayert, Sinclair, Man.

• It seems that the Joan Fairfax Show has replaced the wonderful and lovable December Bride permanently. So what do we get on the J.F. show?—a few contortionists called dancers and a young woman who can change her dress four times in 30 minutes. That's talent?—Mrs. John Schmitz, Humbolt, Sask.

For more about Joan's talents, see page 4.

Music on Radio

• It is high time that I sent you a note of thanks for the most interesting broadcast on Royal Composers. It was presenting history of music in a fascinating way. Please let us have more broadcasts like this one!

I am aware that it is not nice to criticize you after paying a compliment, but here it is—

When I get up shortly before 7:00 a.m. a blast of march music meets my ears. Believe me, I just do not feel peppy enough to march at this time. Then after the news only "popular" music is broadcast. Maybe I do not feel "popular" enough, but do you really think that all your listeners enjoy this type of music? How about a fair share for every taste; three days of popular music, three days of classical, from 7 to 7:30 a.m.? I hope there are some more queer individuals like me.—Margaret Kuntzmueller, Winnipeg.

Defends Drama

• This morning I heard Mr. Willis reading a letter from a clergyman condemning the radio production of Eugene O'Neill's Long Day's Journey Into Night. The first thought that went through my mind was, "What about other great dramas such as the Greek tragedy Oedipus Rex, Shakespeare's Othello, Macbeth, etc., Ibsen's plays, and so on? Would he condemn these too?" I would be far happier to know that he was fighting drug addiction and other diseases of our society than good dramas about them. Some of us live in the midst of various evils without concern until one points them out, as in a play. Then some people get busy doing a cover-up job instead of helping to clean up the mess. I heard the play and liked it. I hope that letter Mr. Willis read on In Reply will be printed in the CBC Times as I was busy when it was read. It was such a masterful denunciation! We like listening to good music as well as dramas such as this one of O'Neill's. In fact we record some of the programs on our tape recorder so that we may listen to them again at other times.—Mrs. N. McCutcheon, Regina.

We would like to print the letter from the Regina clergyman, but it is very long and so "tightly" written that it cannot be shortened without doing the writer an injustice. It was not only (as Mrs. McCutcheon says) a "masterful denunciation," but also a quite fair presentation of one point of view—that almost anything is fit material for a book ("where like minds can meet") but that material

These Are the Dancers . . .

The faces behind the voices on Marian Waldman's serial, "The Dancers," may come as a surprise to many listeners. But here they are—seated: Jack Whitehouse and Hilda McLean, who play Frank and Greta, the parents, parents-in-law, or grandparents of the rest of the cast. Standing: Perry Rosemond (Carl, the younger son); Frances Depres (Frances Carman, the elder daughter); Marian Waldman (Natalie, the daughter-in-law); Cec Montgomery (Val, the elder son, husband of Natalie); Jane Hefflefinger (Angela, the younger daughter). Missing is Fred Haywood, who plays Arthur Carman, husband of Frances.

"The Dancers" is produced daily from Winnipeg on Trans-Canada Matinee by Gus Kristjanson.

MUSIC ON RADIO

by DR. BOYD NEEL

WE do not often get a chance of hearing the chamber music of Vaughan Williams, for the simple reason that he wrote so little of it, but, even then, performances of his String Quartet in G minor are extremely rare these days. The work is well worth hearing every now and again though, as it is very typical of the period in which it was written. The original version dates from 1908, but the version generally played today is the revision made by the composer in 1921. It shows the influence of Brahms to a certain extent and now and then there is a distinct touch of Debussy. It has been very well described by an English critic as "a delicate piece of work, shaded in colours of subdued brilliance." It can be heard on Sunday morning (Tuesday night on CBW) played by the Vancouver String Quartet.

The New York Philharmonic concert on Nov. 14* starts with a Concerto for Orchestra by Durante, who was a Neapolitan composer of the early 18th century. Quite a big figure in his time, he is almost forgotten today, but his music is well worth an effort at revival. The Concerto to be played on Saturday has been edited by Adrian Lualdi, an Italian critic and conductor who has done a great deal in reviving the music of the past. Lualdi has founded a chamber orchestra which has given many performances of unpublished old Italian music and I have no doubt that this concerto by Durante is one of the pieces in this orchestra's repertoire.

The life of Durante was full of incident and he will always be remembered for one astonishing feat. This was the writing out again, from memory, of all his compositions which his third wife had sold while he was away from home. On finding that she had disposed of all his precious manuscripts, he just ing and expresses some opinions about the cultural climate in which we live.

She began her working life as a stenographer; she now owns her own secretarial school and is the former owner of a radio station.

Cooking School of the Air. Eggs are basic foods—rich in proteins and vitamins—and can be used for main dishes as well as for breakfast. Today, Matinee's Cooking School expert, Eustella Langdon, takes the basic omelet as her theme and plays upon it variations such as herbs, Spanish sauce, vegetables, cheese, even jelly and hot rum!

So You're Elected? Stephen Leacock once wrote an essay based upon his experiences as a lecturer; a rather bitter satire called "We Have With Us Tonight" relating gambits that club chairmen used to introduce him in various lecture halls across the country. "We were going to have so-and-so," one chairman began, "but our club funds were rather low so we thought we'd get cheaper talent. I now give you Mr. Leacock." Vancouver's Shirley Brett, once a CBC morning commentator, has had her own experiences as a guest speaker. Today, in Matinee's series for the organization woman, Shirley advises on the care and feeding of the speaker.

sat down and rewrote his entire output. The only parallel in history that I can think of, is Carlyle rewriting the whole of his "French Revolution" after it had been inadvertently thrown on the fire by the chambermaid.

The stories connected with Durante are endless and Rousseau called him "the greatest harmonist of Italy, that is to say, of the world."

Also in the Philharmonic concert on November 14 we can hear Samuel Barber's Knoxville: Summer of 1915. This dates from 1947 and was commissioned by Eleanor Steber and first performed by her with the Boston Symphony Orchestra the following year. Later Barber made a version of the work for soprano and chamber orchestra. The text of the work is part of an autobiographical essay by James Agee and it speaks of the twilight hour "when people sit on their porches, rocking gently and talking gently and watching the street and the standing up into their sphere of possession of the trees, of birds' hung haven, hangars."

On Sunday evening Geza Anda is to play the 2nd Piano Concerto of Bela Bartok with the Vancouver Symphony. This Concerto has never become as popular as the number 3, but, when they become familiar with it, I think most people will agree that it has even more to offer than the other masterpiece. It dates from 1930, when Bartok was deep in his discovery of Hungarian folksongs. The solo part needs a virtuoso performer of the very first order and a good performance can be a most exciting experience.

TRANS-CANADA MATINEE

Please Don't Pass The Sugar. This is national diabetics week—an appropriate time to observe that there are a great many Canadians suffering from this disease who live perfectly normal lives. Ed Arrol, a teacher at View Royal college in Victoria, B.C., is one of them. He talks about the daily regimen of diet, exercise and insulin, perfectly balanced, that enable him and his fellow diabetics to carry on their normal daily activities.

Sights and Sounds at the Royal Winter Fair. Canada's Royal Agricultural Winter Fair takes place this year at Toronto's Coliseum from November 13 to 21. Some 118 judges from three countries will evaluate the 3,000 cattle, 1,300 horses, 700 swine, 1,000 sheep, 5,000 poultry, goats, grains, vegetables, fruits and farm produce on display. As usual at Winter Fairs, there'll be a horse show, a flower show, a miniature Royal of young animals and poultry, a mink fashion show, a photographic exhibition, a horseshoe-pitching competition and a sheep-shearing contest, as well as a precision riding demonstration by the RCMP. The CBC's morning commentator in Toronto takes her tape-recorder to the Royal for an on-the-spot report.

At Home with the Ancients. George Woodcock has been describing home life among ancient civilizations. Up to this point, he's been talking about people in Europe and the Middle East. Today, he moves to the western hemisphere for a glimpse at the life of the Cortes' soldiers who destroyed the magnificent Aztec city of Tenochtitlan. Mr. Woodcock reconstructs the life of the Aztecs. He is editor of the new UBC quarterly, "Canadian Literature," and author of several books and contributes frequently to CBC programs.

Daily Features . . . News commentary by Constance Garneau of Montreal, recorded music presented by Ruby Mercer, and another episode in Marian Waldman's serial, "The Dancers," produced in Winnipeg by Gus Kristjanson.

PRAIRIE TALK

This week Joyce Irvine of Winnipeg tells what happened when an English friend decided to build a Canadian house in England—a ranch style house with picture windows, green shingles instead of a slate roof, cupboards instead of wardrobes, pipes and heating ducts on the inside, and a big kitchen. "What David was doing was roughly comparable to building an Arabian mosque on Main Street," Mrs. Irvine says. Although her friend had to fight with his architect on every point, the architect was so pleased with the final result that he has written an enthusiastic article on "his" house for one of the British architectural journals. (On next week's Prairie Talks Mrs. Irvine talks about some of "the stately homes of England," and describes the guided tours which enable their owners to maintain them.)

Better Music

• May I add my earnest plea to that of Mrs. L. R. of Herbert, Sask., in your edition of September 18th, for more semi-classical and classical music on television? Would it not be possible to have just one good concert of vocal and orchestral music a week this winter? To so many listeners it is truly painful to have to hear so many strident singers of "popular" music, both male and female. I am at a loss to understand the big following won by such programs as the Ed Sullivan Show where one endures so many turns of the above-mentioned types of solos, so many really feeble American humorists and repetitious numbers in order not to miss that wonderful young Israeli violinist, or the ever-appealing Un bel di . . . My husband and I have much enjoyed Rhapsody, and are most disappointed that it is to be discontinued. We also enjoyed the Dave King Show, also now ended. We are happy to have back Front Page Challenge.—Mrs. E. M. Catley, Calgary.

Where Dogs and People Go to School. There's an unusual educational institution in San Francisco. It's a school for the blind and their seeing eye dogs. Both the dog and his master attend the school where the two are taught to work with each other and to react to each other's impulses. Elizabeth Odium, Toronto business woman and freelance writer broadcaster, visited the school and reports.

School for Parents. Dr. S. R. Laycock of Saskatoon, a former dean of the college of education at the University of Saskatchewan and an authority on parent education, has been conducting his annual CBC school for parents. He's talked about some of the major subjects children are taught in school and the methods used to teach them. Today, he talks about the child that differs from the average—the exceptional child—who needs special understanding, help and guidance both at home and at school.

To Read in December. This is children's book week in Canada. In Edmonton, Ruth MacDonald observes children's book month—in December—to take her children's minds off the usually frenzied preparations for Christmas. In this Matinee talk, Mrs. MacDonald reviews some of the books she and her children have found appropriate for the pre-Christmas season.

THE KILLERS

Their conversation was written up recently in This Week magazine by his friend A. E. Hotchner. The students wanted to know how he developed his style of writing, and did he do it to be commercial or to create a public demand? He replied: "In stating as fully as I could how things really were, it was often very difficult and I wrote awkwardly and the awkwardness is what they called my style."

Many people have wondered whether the harshly colourful people in his books are based on studies of actual persons, but Hemingway says: "I don't go where I go for that purpose; I just go where my life takes me. There are things you do because you like to do them, other things because you have to do them. In doing these things you find people you write about. . . . You put down the words in hot blood, like an argument, and correct them when your temper has cooled."

He usually writes "no more than six hours" at a time. "After that you're too pooped and the quality goes. When I'm working on a book

I try to write every day except Sunday. It's very bad luck to work on a Sunday. Sometimes I do it, but it's bad luck, just the same."

His long-time friend, Marlene Dietrich, describes him as "the most fascinating man I have ever known. He has found time to do all the things most men only dream about." Hemingway says that all he asks from life is "to write, hunt, fish and be obscure." His formula for getting the most out of life is "never look for excitement—let excitement come to you." And he has had a large helping of it in his time, attracting unusual people and circumstances with his ripely interested and interesting personality. Miss Dietrich says "he is the most positive life force I have ever encountered. I hate anything negative, and I hate waste. In Hemingway nothing is wasted." Except, perhaps, the four months he spent as a reporter in Toronto in the fall of 1923, when he intended to stay two years. Shaking the dust of the city off his feet with a few well-placed expletives, he announced that Toronto had taken five years off his life. But he seemed to recover rapidly, and (who knows?) perhaps the fact that Toronto failed to recognize his literary talent was the spur that made possible such brilliant, frightening stories as The Killers.

Nicholas Gore tells the story of how he and his

Bill Good reports toPrairie Sports Final

Vancouver sports writer Bill Good is well known to prairie listeners; he has been a sportscaster in Wilkie, Saskatchewan (when he was still in high school), and Moose Jaw, and written sports columns in Winnipeg, Regina and Moose Jaw. Since 1942 he has done sports broadcasts from every major city in Canada. He has even spoken to his western network audiences from Tokyo, Seoul, Paris, Hanover and England. His program on the British Empire Games in 1954 was the first studio origination from CBC Vancouver's television studios. Bill is especially well-known for his coverage of football, curling, and golf.

Grey Cup Fever. There are football fans who regularly attend every practice, beginning in July, and every game, beginning in August, of their favourite team. There are other football fans from look up from their newspapers in mid-November to announce knowledgeably that the East is going to play the West in a Grey Cup final on the last November Saturday. Ann Robson, Toronto housewife and freelance broadcaster, is one of the latter. Her thesis is that Grey Cup fever is no less contagious to those whom it strikes last!

Author, Aristocrat . . . When Anne Francis was in Denmark this summer, she met the Baroness Blixen, who, as Isak Dinesen, has written many well-known books—"Seven Gothic Tales," "Out of Africa," "Winters' Tales" and "Last Tales." Man will have to discipline himself to the fact that his environment is now world-wide and must realize that there will always be potential danger until individual nations begin to think in terms of the welfare of humanity as a whole. The writing on the wall is tolerably clear; if Man behaves like an animal and allows his population to increase while each nation steadily increases the complexity and range of its environment, nature will take her course and the Law of the Jungle will prevail.—Sir James Gray on BBC.

I remember when patching and mending were subjects taught in schools, now we don't even mend stockings, and I don't shed any tears over that. I think it is the best thing science has ever done.—Minnie

Pallister on BBC.
